Suspect in Pahokee student's murder killed in retaliation, PBCSO believes

By Tracy Whirls
Associate Editor

The suspect in the July, 1999 shooting death of a Pahokee High School student was himself found shot to death Jan. 2 in Pahokee.

Furnice Moree, 48, was found laying face down in a homemade shelter near the southwest corner of West 4th Street and Rardin Ave. He had multiple gunshot wounds to the torso.

Witnesses told sheriff's investigators that a black male wearing a dark blue hooded pullover sweatshirt and a black ski mask was seen firing shots at the victim at close range and while the deceased was laying on the ground. The suspect then fled the area on foot.

According to Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office Sgt. David Carhart, the victim, Moree had been arrested and charged with first degree murder and possession of a gun by a convicted felon in connection with the July 15, 1999 shotgun shooting of Lavonski Williams, 17, of Pahokee.

"We believe this is in retaliation for the murder of Lavonski Williams last year,"

Sgt. Carhart said.

At the time of that incident, witnesses told sheriff's officers that Moree had shot the teen in the back, then shot him in the face after he collapsed on the steps of his home.

Sgt. Carhart said Moree was released from jail Aug. 16, 1999 after the Palm Beach County Grand Jury failed to find a true bill against him.

"Witnesses changed their testimony and he was released from jail a day and a month after Williams' murder," Sgt. Carhart said. Moree left the area and was believed to be living in Ft. Lauderdale.

"He came back just before Christmas and a confidential informant told us that someone was looking for him. He knew it too," Sgt. Carhart said.

The investigator refuted claims that the department is dismissing the case as an example of street justice.

"We're working this like any other homicide," Sgt. Carhart said.

Anyone with any information is asked to call Sgt. Carhart at 996-1870, or, if they prefer to remain anonymous, they may call CrimeStoppers at 1-800-458-8477.

Local election date to change in 2001

By Brenda Bunting
Editor

Belle Glade City Commissioners voted to change the local election from September to the second week in March. Discussion about changing the date has been ongoing for several months, but Mayor Harma Miller said she wanted to "get this taken care of now," and made the proposal to the commission Monday night.

She said she also wants the voters to decide in September if they want commissioner's terms to extend from the current two year terms to three, or even four year terms. Staff agreed to draft the wording to be used on a Sept. 12 ballot referendum.

"Plastic lumber" factory to locate in South Bay

By Tracy Whirls

South Bay Commissioners voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve a special exception for Rockwood Composite Lumber Co. to change the zoning for the former Corralite Building to light industrial, clearing the way for the company to begin preparations to manufacture "plastic lumber."

According to Stephen Mathison, attorney for Rockwood, the company will use recycled plastic, purchased from the county's solid waste authority, and combine it with bagasse, fiber from sugar cane to manufacture the material which then can be used for dock pilings, fencing, highway spacers for guardrails and other products.

"It's a very environmentally friendly process. There are no noxious noises, no gas fumes, no chemicals," Mr. Mathison said.

and Commissioner Steve Weeks had objected to changing the election date to the second week in March.

"I don't have any problem with changing to March, but I do object to the second week," Mr. Mathis said, before voting against the change.

Mr. Weeks, who was absent from the meeting, has said he feels changing to the second Tuesday in March, when the county has their elections, would take away from the hometown atmosphere of the local elections.

Currently, the city election is held at the Belle Glade Fire Station. Now, voters will have to go to the precinct listed on their voter's registration card to vote.

The two materials are injected into a machine called an extruder, which uses heat alone to create a very strong material more resistant to the environment than regular lumber.

Rockwood president John Dowherty told commissioners the company, which will refurbish the old building, hopes to get the machinery shipped in and set up within 30-45 days. They expect to begin advertising for employees within the next two weeks, and eventually to employ 100 people in within a year.

"We're happy to report to you that we already have a contract for $1.8 million for the product," Mr. Dowherty said.

Plans call for the company to build a second facility in the South Bay industrial park, if all goes well, where the bagasse/plastic mixture can be pre-mixed to facilitate production.

The first baby of the New Year in the Glades

Ka'Shatavia Gibson, daughter of Patricia and Dexter Gibson of Belle Glade, was the first baby of the new year born at Glades General Hospital. Ka'Shatavia was born at 9:19 a.m. on Jan. 1. The hospital presented the Gibson family with a basket full of baby gifts, from diapers to rattles and everything in between. Included in the basket was a gift certificate for the baby's picture, compliments of Averills and a frame donated by Everglades Trading. Ka'Shatavia left the hospital safely, tucked into a brand new car seat, also donated by the hospital.

The Big Lake Sunday News to debut Jan. 9

The New Year brings a new publication to the communities south of Lake Okeechobee. The Big Lake Sunday News, a joint effort of the daily Okeechobee News, the Clewiston News, the Glades County Democrat and The Sun, will be circulated in Belle Glade, Pahokee, Canal Point, South Bay, Clewiston and Moore Haven. The first edition will be published Jan. 9, 2000.

The Big Lake Sunday News will be for sale at all stores and newspaper racks that currently sell the Clewiston News, the Glades County Democrat and The Sun. Some residents will find free samples of the paper delivered to their homes.

The Okeechobee News has been serving the communities on the north end of the big lake since 1915.

"Florida history shows us that a newspaper ties a community together," says Executive Editor Katrina Elsen. "In many cases, newspapers were started to help a community organize as a town, a city or a county."

The Big Lake Sunday News is also part of the Independent Newspapers Florida newspaper family. All of the papers in the INI Florida group have a long history of community journalism and service to their communities.

The Okeechobee News then known as the Okeechobee Call) was established two years before Okeechobee County became a county. The Clewiston News has served "America's sweetest town" since 1928. The Sun has been Western Palm Beach County's hometown newspaper since 1923. The Glades County Democrat has been serving Glades County since 1923. The Caloosa Belle was established in LaBelle in 1922. The Frostproof News has been serving that community since 1914.

The addition of The Big Lake Sunday News will give readers on the south side of Lake Okeechobee access to regional, state and national news as well as breaking news stories from their own communities. The Sunday paper will also focus on issues that affect Lake Okeechobee, which are of concern to all who live in the lake area.

"In the same way the Okeechobee News, Clewiston News, Glades County Democrat and The Sun helped to tie their individual communities together in Florida's pioneer days, we hope The Big Lake Sunday News will help unite all the communities around the lake in efforts to preserve and improve the health of Lake Okeechobee," Ms. Elsen said.

"Many times I have been at meetings regarding issues concerning the lake and state officials tell the local residents that they must present a united front before they will get any attention from governmental officials. Our weekly community newspapers, the daily Okeechobee News and the new Big Lake Sunday News can help by keeping the area residents informed and providing space on our opinion pages for community debate," she said.

The Clewiston News, Glades County Democrat and The Sun will continue to provide coverage of their hometowns, as they have for decades.

All of the papers in the INI Florida group share a dedication to community journalism and to service to their respective hometowns.

Unlike most other newspapers, the INI newspapers belong to a non-profit trust. That means all revenues that are generated by the newspapers go back into operating and improving the newspapers. There are no owners or stockholders taking a percentage.

"We hope the communities south of Lake Okeechobee will embrace this new product just as they have always supported the Clewiston News, Glades County Democrat and The Sun in Western Palm Beach County," said Ms. Elsen.

Seventh Street Bridge to be closed for repairs

On Monday, Jan. 3, the Belle Glade City Commission ratified the closing of the S.E. 7th Street Bridge, based on the recommendation of Kisinger Campo & Associated Corp., an engineering firm out of Brandon, Florida.

For several months plans have been developed to do structural repairs and painting of the S.E. 7th Street Bridge and the S.W. 7th Street Pedestrian Bridge.

Director of Public Safety Michael Miller said with the opening of the new Lake Shore Middle School in August it is imperative the remodeling is done to improve safety conditions for the children who will be walking to school.

Chief Miller told commissioners it is estimated that over 2,000 children will be walking to school between Belle Glade Elementary and Lake Shore Middle.

Bids were submitted from three different companies to do the work. On Monday the bid was awarded to Murphy Construction Company. Work will begin soon.

A well-stocked first aid kit important in emergencies

Katrina Elskin
Contributing Editor hand until an emergency arises — and then it's too late.

"Take Care of Yourself, A Consumers Guide to Medical Care," by Dr. Donald Vickery and Dr. James Fries, offers some good general advice on items to keep on hand to handle common medical problems. Before stocking your home first aid kit, consider who is likely to use it. Do you have small children at home? Do grandchildren sometimes visit your home? Are there any senior citizens in your household? Do any other members of your household need special medical care?

The doctors advise checking your medicine cabinet and throwing out any medications that have passed their expiration dates. Old medicine may not be good medicine. Some drugs become less potent with age. Others might break down enough to actually be harmful. Dr. Vickery and Dr. Fries suggest the following items be kept on hand:

- Aspirin and/or acetaminophen, for fever, headache and minor pain. (If you have children at home, make sure you have the right dosages for each. Babies need infant drops. Young children need the "children's" dosages in liquid form. Don't try to cut a tablet made for adults and give it to a child.

- Keep a non-aspirin fever and pain reliever on hand for children. Aspirin should not be given to children who may have chicken pox or influenza, because it may lead to Reye's Syndrome.)

- Antacid, for stomach upset.
- Adhesive tape, gauze and adhesive bandages, for minor wounds.

- Hydrogen peroxide, for cleansing wounds.

- Sodium bicarbonate, for soaking and soothing.
- Syrup of ipecac, to induce vomiting in case of accidental poisoning.

- Depending on your family and lifestyle, you might want to add to this list. There are a wide range of over-the-counter medications available. However, the doctors warn, misuse of over-the-counter drugs can have serious consequences.

- Do not assume that a product is automatically safe because it does not require a prescription," the book states.

- Other items you might want to keep on hand include:

- Antihistamines, if anyone in your family has allergies.

- Iodine, for use as an antiseptic.

- Milk of magnesia to treat constipation.

- Kaopectate or Parapetolin, to treat diarrhea.

- Eye drops or artificial tears, to clean eyes of irritants.

- Hydrocortisone cream, to treat skin rashes.

- Elastic bandages for sprains.

- Sunscreen, to prevent sunburn.

- Baking soda, to be put in a cool bath to ease sunburn pain.

Check with your family physician about other items you should keep on hand. For example, if your child is allergic to insect bites, you might need to have a prescription medication on hand for emergencies.

Dr. Vickery and Dr. Fries also stress the importance of keeping all medications out of the reach of young children.

ER Chronicles: An orange Mickey Mouse t-shirt

Arlen R.
Stauffer, MD

the ER radio this afternoon got everyone's attention. The place was packed; there were patients on stretchers in the hall.

But, everything and everyone else would have to wait.

Phil and another ER nurse grabbed two beds from the Resuscitation Room and wheeled them to nearby spots in the hall, trying to explain to these two patients that they were being displaced by an emergency that was, indeed, worse than their own problems today. Yes, they would have to wait longer.

Emergency physician Tammy Cortez hurriedly wrote a prescription and some discharge instructions for another hallway patient, clearing at least this one bed before the cardiac arrest patient arrived. She handed the finished chart to an assistant and looked up just as the paramedics rolled their stretcher into the Resuscitation Room.

"OK. Here we go again," she thought as she hurried into the room with one eye on the cardiac monitor and the other on the paramedic doing CPR on this middle-aged man's chest.

"Whatta we got?"

"He apparently collapsed while jogging," the paramedic said between breaths, shaking the perspiration from his chin.

"Jogging? In this heat?" Phil couldn't believe what he had heard.

The man was pulled onto the ER bed, the monitor leads were switched to the ER's equipment, and Phil took over on the chest compressions.

"Yes. Jogging," the paramedic added as he took a couple deep breaths and wiped his forehead. "He was in Ventricular Fib when we got there. We've been through four defibrillations, and some epinephrine and lidocaine doses."

He paused, the expression on his face becoming more serious. "I think he's actually in Asystole now."

The mood in the Resuscitation Room became suddenly pessimistic. If this man was in Ventricular Fibrillation, with a quivering, chaotic heart, then defibrillation with electricity would at least have a chance of re-starting his heartbeat. But Asystole, with absolutely no heart activity at all, well, that diagnosis is usually a death sentence.

"Oh," Cortez frowned. "Do we have any history on this guy? He doesn't look very old." Then, looking at the flat line on the cardiac monitor, she added, "Keep the chest compressions going, and give him another milligram of epinephrine."

"All he had on were these jogging shorts and that orange Mickey Mouse T-shirt, no form of ID," the paramedic said. "There was a car nearby, but it was locked. The cops were checking on the owner of that car when we left for here."

The paramedic's words seemed almost rhythmic, mirroring the beat of the chest compressions that Phil continued.

"OK. Hold up on the compressions for a bit; let's see if there is any sign of heart activity." Cortez studied the monitor. Still a flat line.

Phil shook his head and looked to Cortez for guidance.

"Resume chest compressions," she said. "We've got to try everything. This guy's so young."

"Give a dose of Atropine, then let's try the external pacemaker."

The team continued its task. A police officer popped his head around the edge of the curtain.

"I think we found the wife," he said with a frown. "She ID'd the car. She said he was wearing an orange Mickey Mouse T-shirt when he left their home."

"Oh," Cortez lamented. She knew there would be another unpleasant task to accomplish soon.

"I've got her in the Family Waiting Room. I didn't know what to tell her," the officer added.

Cortez nodded, then refocused on the monitor.

Still Asystole.

The medications had not worked. The external pacemaker produced no heartbeats. The chest compressions did not seem to be providing any real blood flow.

"OK. That's it," Cortez took a deep breath. "I'm calling it at 1416 hours."

Cortez motioned with her head to Phil. He understood what was about to happen, and he walked with Cortez to the Family Waiting Room.

She pushed the door open. Only one person sat in the room, and she appeared calm, smiling as the two entered.

"Hi. I'm Dr. Cortez."

"Hi. I'm Judy; nice to meet you." This woman was happy, almost bubbling as she extended her hand toward Cortez. "I've heard that my husband had a little accident."

Then it hit Cortez: Judy didn't have any idea about what had really happened, that the husband who left home this afternoon with his orange Mickey Mouse T-shirt was now lying dead on an ER bed.

"Sit down with me here, Judy."

This was the worst part about being an emergency physician.

Sudden cardiac death is common in America, claiming the lives of 250,000 adults each year.

Only a small percentage of these victims survive, even with modern resuscitation efforts.

Sudden cardiac death is most often caused by an abrupt change in heart rhythm, which occurs because of a tragic interaction between an abnormality in the structure of the heart and a disturbance in a portion of the complicated electrical system within the heart.

Very fast rhythms develop, Ventricular Tachycardia, or Ventricular Fibrillation, creating sudden loss of consciousness.

Death follows within a few minutes if successful resuscitation is not accomplished.

If the sudden collapse is witnessed, and if CPR efforts are begun immediately, the chances of survival are increased significantly.

James Jackson still our hero

"James Jackson is a very determined, hardworking individual. Although Jackson's season is not going like expected, he will still remain on top. James has never been an individual to give up, and I know he will succeed in any future endeavor he chooses.

In life, one must be reminded of obstacles. They sometimes allow you to become a better individual, while others prepare you for the tough road that lies ahead of you. James, always remember God is our creator and he can turn impossibilities into possibilities. You need to stay focused and know your family and true friends will stay by your side through your entire ordeal. In Belle Glade, you are and will always be our hero.

James, get yourself and your condition better first, and everything else will fall into the correct perspective. Lastly, put Christ in all that you choose to do.

A Belle Glade resident."

It doesn't add up

"I went to Georgia for a week. When I crossed the state line, gas for premium was $1.39 a gallon. It got cheaper as I went north. Regular was $1.06 a gallon.

They say that around here there is not much of a turnover for gas, and that's why it's so high. Well how about the small one-horse towns I went through in Georgia?

We have a port close by where they transport to gas stations out here. I wonder how far these stations, in Valdosta, Georgia are from their sources? Some of them are really small stations in very small towns, and yet their prices are much lower. Why?

A working poor person will soon be run out of Palm Beach County. In the next five years we will have to move to make ends meet."

Glades Central Raider #5, the leader of the pack

"Glades Central's football team has had some outstanding football players through the years. No one, though, has been as strong or been as high a performer as #5 Jatavious (Jay) McRae.

This particular player is not recognized as he should be. There is always a spotlight on a maximum of three to four players, without proper recognition given to others who truly deserve it.

Even though both winning and losing are team efforts, I feel talent should be noticed and then praised. Without #5, Jatavious McRae being affiliated with the Raider's squad, we would not be as far as we are today.

Jatavious brings new meaning to the statement. It's not the size of the man in the game, but it's the size of the game in the man."

Lastly, my hat goes off to the entire Raider team, but I strongly applaud Jatavious for his talents and inclined abilities as well.

A true Raider fan."

Set the record straight

"This is in regard to the person who called last week and said Commissioner Wilkerson probably used her own money to take the trip to California.

Well, The Sun newspaper knows that the taxpayers paid for that trip and the commissioners voted for her to take that trip for no benefit. So, will The Sun newspaper please verify that she did take the trip at the taxpayer's expense?"

Editor's note: Commissioner Mary Ross Wilkerson was approved by the city commission to take the trip to California. She thanked fellow commissioners at the Dec. 27 commission meeting for the opportunity to attend and said she learned a lot at workshops she attended.

We have noted a concerted effort by one caller to make frequent calls to our Speak Out line about Ms. Wilkerson. While we do want our readers to feel free to express their concerns on public matters, we feel it is unfair for one individual to dominate our Speak Out section in a campaign to discredit anyone. Unless this caller has something fundamentally different to say, we will not be inclined to continue to run these calls.

Year in Review left out something important

"I want to thank The Sun for the Year in Review section in last week's paper. It was very informative to give the people this information, however, I just want to add one more item to this wonderful section.

You left out the scam of the year where people of the Glades were misled by tricksters to invest hundreds of thousands of dollars in a scam under the name of The Winner's Circle. Many people have lost their life savings in this scam, believing they would be able to receive benefits plus interest on their money. This was a scam orchestrated even by local individuals who set out to defraud and were successful in doing this.

Unfortunately, the people who lost all this money are ashamed to come forward. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Can you stand just one more comment on our water bills?

After weeks of reading the "outrage" of our citizens pertaining to their water bills and after attending numerous City Commission meetings where citizens continue to lament that which cannot be changed, I felt compelled to provide a new perspective that may help to provide information.

I went back into my records and looked at my water bill from six years ago (11/23/93). For 6,000 gallons of water, my water bill was $66.83. My water bill today (11/22/99) for 6,000 gallons of water is $86.80. A difference of $19.97. Next, I proceeded to calculate the annual percentage increase of my water bill over the past six years. That percentage increase was 4.4540%. I then did the same for my cable television bill, $28.25 in 1993 and $36.81 today (after the new increase scheduled to begin January 2000). Would you believe a percentage increase over the same period of 4.5120%!

Where is the outrage over the cable bills? I don't know about you, but I greatly value the ability to have hot and cold running water over a few more cable TV channels. Even for water at 1.447 cents per gallon, (yes, that's what it works out to be and that includes sewer, garbage pick up and mosquito control). What a deal! I can't get a gallon of milk for that. Even the bottled water that I choose to buy, would you believe, I pay $1.31 per gallon for it?

My point is this, if our complaining citizens would put as much time and energy into helping improve our community as they have in complaining about what appears to me to be a "reasonable" increase in our water bills, we might just create a community where new business and industry would be thrilled to locate. Imagine that: improvements in employment opportunities, an expanded base upon which to spread costs to operate the city, lower water bills, a community we can all be proud of! All it takes is an appropriate focus of our collective energies such as promoting, community improvement/clean up/beautification functions, etc.

Maybe it's not time to close the Speak Out column to anyone of this same discussion about water bills, and move on to things we can really have an impact with, such as community improvement. Perhaps if every caller would propose a solution to every problem he/she presents we can take a big step in that direction.

Sincerely,
Carl Seibert

A gift for Lake Okeechobee.

By David B. Strubs, Secretary

Florida Department of Environmental Protection

Over the past quarter-century local, state and federal government officials have earned the equivalent of multiple PhD's studying Lake Okeechobee. These types of degrees would be conferred on the basis of extensive research, practical experience and well-supported theories and titled "PhD in Okeechobee Studies." Unfortunately, they would represent the sum total of lake restoration to date.

Lake Okeechobee has probably been the subject of more studies over the past 25 years than any other lake in Florida. Those studies are appropriate since the lake is, after all, the second largest lake in the United States. Indeed, it is the only lake of its kind anywhere in the world. It is the headwaters of the Everglades. It is also in big trouble.

It would be easy to follow the historic path of resigning ourselves only to more studies and more research, but that would be a dereliction of our duty. It would be a failure to recognize that while there is still much we don't know about Lake "O", our collective "PhD's" have brought us to the point where we know what the remedies are for recovery and restoration. And we know the sooner that we begin the work, the more likely it is we will succeed.

On December 21, I had the privilege to stand on the shores of Lake Okeechobee and represent Governor Bush, Lt. Governor Brogan, the Department of Environmental Protection and the entire Bush Administration to announce the best gift that Lake Okeechobee has received in a long time: action!

On that day, I stood with legislative leaders such as State Representative Ken Pruitt and State Senator John Laurent to support their proposed "Lake Okeechobee Restoration Program." This plan provides:

- A water shed management program calling for the phased implementation of Phosphorus load reductions.
- A construction program that will consist of stormwater treatment areas, reservoir assisted stormwater treatment areas, and other detention facilities.
- A Phosphorus control program using Best Management Practices for nonprofit, agricultural, and nonagricultural sources.
- Comprehensive water quality evaluation and monitoring.
- Identification and eradication of invasive exotic species and measures to protect native flora and fauna.
- Funding for: capital improvement, landowner assistance and land acquisition.

We are pleased that in addition to the Bush Administration, the plan enjoys broad support ranging from Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford, Director Frank Finch and the Governing Board of the South Florida Water Management District, and key environmental groups. They recognize that delay is not an option. These are leaders who understand that collaboration will allow us to accomplish more in a shorter period.

Now the state has a plan that is supported by years of study.

It will move forward with the further support of second science and the will of those who want to get the job done. What better present could Lake Okeechobee receive?

The 1990's warmest decade in history

Mike Lyons

Did 1999 seem a bit cooler to you? The folks at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) say it was, by seven tenths of one degree.

NOAA climatologists report that the United States experienced its second warmest year on record during 1999, with an average temperature of 55.7 degrees. That's a little less than 1988's all-time record of 56.4 degrees.

Global temperatures were a tad cooler too, thanks to the influence of La Niña—the nickname for a large pool of cooler-than-normal waters in the Pacific Ocean. NOAA scientists say that chilly water produced the lowest ocean temperatures since 1994, which led to slightly cooler global temperatures.

Still, a long-term trend toward a warmer climate is underway. NOAA says the decade of the 1990's turned out to be the warmest decade in history, while the 20th century has seen a significant increase in global temperatures.

Most scientists blame man-made activities for the rising temperatures, specifically the burning of coal, oil and natural gas. These products produce atmospheric gasses, like carbon dioxide, that trap heat in the atmosphere like a greenhouse. The result: global warming.

Yet not everyone is convinced. Scientists writing in the December issue of the American Meteorological Society's Bulletin, suggest the temperature increases may be part of a natural cycle. "Greenhouse warming alone is insufficient to explain the observed pattern of climate change," say the scientists.

Whatever is turning up the heat, all scientists agree that a warmer planet is not good. If the Earth warms by another 2 to 6 degrees over the next century, as many scientists believe, it may lead to an increase in extreme weather events.

Some regions might experience heavier-than-normal rains, while other parts of the world could suffer from long-term droughts. Sea levels steadily rise and there may be an increase in the intensity and frequency of hurricanes.

Obviously, it is important to settle the argument. Is the greenhouse effect real? Is global warming actually taking place.

The answers may be just around the corner thanks to a new NASA satellite. The Terra spacecraft, placed in Earth orbit by the shuttle Discovery this week, will provide the most comprehensive examination of the Earth's atmosphere, ocean and continents, and, for the first time, perhaps settle the global warming debate.

From an altitude of 438 miles, Terra will circle the Earth 16 times a day studying clouds, water vapor, the continents and oceans, all in an effort to understand the interaction between them and their effect on the Earth's energy budget and climate.

NASA expects Terra to "improve our ability to detect human impacts on climate by identifying 'fingerprints' of human activity on climate." In addition, the satellite should help scientists predict climate change by providing global data for sophisticated computer models.

The satellite may also have a big impact on weather forecasting, particularly droughts and floods. And it may help climatologists improve long-term weather forecasts, too.

The name "Terra," in honor of our planet's mythical Mother Earth, was suggested by student in St. Louis. It seems an appropriate name, since Terra may finally settle an issue that may be one of the most important in Mother Earth's history.

Five UF researchers win award for work with rice

Five UF/IFAS faculty were recently honored for their pioneering work on the value of silicon fertilization in agriculture, particularly for rice and sugarcane production in South Florida.

Jose Alvarez, Lawrence Datnoff, Christopher Deren, Thomas Kucharek and George Snyder have found that silicon provides highly effective control of certain rice diseases.

"They demonstrated that use of silicon reduces the need for fungicides and the residual effects of this element one year later provide effective disease control comparable to the application of fungicides. The team also found this element could enhance control of the two most important rice diseases in the world - blast and sheath blight.

In the case of rice cultivars that are partially resistant to these diseases, the use of silicon makes them completely resistant. Alvarez, professor of agricultural economics, Datnoff, professor of plant pathology, Deren, professor of agronomy/breeding, and George Snyder, distinguished professor of soil science, are based at the UF/IFAS center in Belle Glade. Kucharek, professor of plant pathology, is at the UF in Gainesville.

They were nominated for the award by Van Waddill, director of the Belle Glade Everglades Research and Education Center.

New Hope Charities in Pahokee hosted its annual visit from Santa Claus for nearly 70 area children and their families Dec. 23.

First year fundraiser a success for migrant organization

Individuals and organizations from throughout Florida agriculture contributed to the successful launch this year of a fundraising program for the Redlands Christian Migrant Association (RCMA), a non-profit organization that serves the families and children of seasonal and migrant farmworkers.

The sale of colorful, original Christmas cards, designed by children attending RCMA's child development centers, generated just under $16,000. The net proceeds from the cards sales will help fund RCMA programs and services such as health care, after school care and day care, as well as special programs such as Head Start for the children and families of seasonal farm labor.

"We appreciate the contributions of time and services that members of the agriculture community and associated industries have devoted to this project," said George Sorn, president of RCMA. "And we are grateful for those who chose our cards to send to family and friends over the holidays."

"These contributions will help us generate additional funding as well," Mr. Sorn added. Local fundraisers such as this one can generate up to 15 times the amount raised in matching state and federal funding.

Plans for next year's holiday card fundraiser are already in the making. Businesses and individuals interested in supporting RCMA's 2000 card project should call the association toll free at 1-888-474-15 and ask to be put on the mailing list for card promotions.

The Christmas card project was coordinated and promoted by Duda & Sons, Inc., Florida City Mutual, Florida Farm Bureau and the Florida Fruit & Vegetable Association. Special contributors were also made by the following organizations: Magnolia Pre Longwood, Meister Publishing Company, Willoughby, Ohio a Vance Publishing Corporation, Lenexa, Kan.

Founded in 1964, RCMA offers approximately 70 programs in counties throughout Florida a serves 6,000 to 7,000 children each year.

Glades General makes Christmas merrier for patients

Glades General helped make Christmas a little merrier for patients who were confined to the hospital this year.

In partnership with Providence Healthcare, Glades General distributed complimentary long-distance phone cards to all in-patients on Christmas Day to allow those people to share holiday greetings with their family and friends.

The phone cards provided up to 30 minutes of free long-distance time.

According to Jim Purcell, CEO, "Our primary commitment is to meet the needs of our patients and the communities we serve. We hope that by making it a little easier to call distant loved ones, we were able to bring a little Christmas joy to those people who had to be in the hospital on Christmas Day."

The program, rightfully named "Christmas Calls" was so successful, hospital administration and Provin Healthcare hope to make it an annual event.
